

Authoring a PhD

*How to plan, draft, write and finish
a doctoral thesis or dissertation*

Patrick Dunleavy

m HOCHSCHULE
• LIECHTENSTEIN
Bibliothek

palgrave
maemillan

Contents

	List of figures and tables	ix
	Preface	x
r	1	Becoming an author	1
		Authoring is more than just writing	2
;		Different models of PhD and the tasks of authoring	5
		Managing readers' expectations	11
		Envisioning the thesis as a whole	18
		Defining the central research questions	18
		Doing original work	26
		Planning an integrated thesis: the macro-structure	43
		The whole and the core	44
		Focusing down or opening out	53
		Four patterns of explanation	62
		Organizing a chapter or paper: the micro-structure	76
		Dividing a chapter into sections	76
		Devising headings and subheadings	84
		Handling starts and finishes	89
		Writing clearly: style and referencing issues	103
		The elements of good research style	104
		Effective referencing	120

	6	Developing your text and managing the writing process
		Drafting, upgrading and going public
		Remodelling text
		Organizing the writing process
	7	Handling attention points: data, charts and graphics
		Principles for presenting data well
		Handling tables
		Designing charts and graphs
		Other techniques for data reduction
		Using diagrams and images
	8	The end-game: finishing your doctorate	197
		From a first full draft to your final text	199
		Submitting the thesis and choosing examiners	209
		The final oral examination (viva)	217
	9	Publishing your research	227
		Writing and submitting journal papers	227
		Re-working your thesis as a book	251
		Afterword
		Glossary of maxims, terms and phrases
		Notes
		Further reading
		Index	