

AESTHETICS

A STUDY OF THE FINE ARTS
IN THEORY AND PRACTICE

By

JAMES K. FEIBLEMAN

Graduate Professor of Philosophy in Tulcme University

D U E L L , S L O A N A N D P E A R C E

New York

Contents

INTRODUCTION

vii

FART I. A THEORY OF AESTHETICS

Chapter

I.	Orientations: The Logical Value of the Objects of Art	3
II	The Ontology of Art	23
III	The Five Functions of Art	41
IV	The Mean-rig of Tragedy	62
V	The Meaning of Comedy	81
VI	The Psychology of the Artist	99
VII	The Psychology of An Appreciation	138
VIII	The Place of Art in Human Culture	162
IX	The Hypothesis of Aesthetic Measure	201

PART II. SOME EXAMPLES OF PRACTICE IN THE FINE ARTS

X	The Definition of Poetry	245
XI	The Theory of Hamlet	262
XII	The Scientific Outlook of Cezanne	290
XIII	The Art of the Dance	302
XIV	The Aims of Archibect.ii.re	320
XV	Music as an Element in the Universe	336
XVI	The Basicity of the Plastic Arts	353
XVII	Human Life as a Fine Art	375
XVIII	The Decline of Literary Chaos	400
XIX	Master Myth and the Modem Artist	420
XX	The Concave Favor	433