

LEADERSHIP AND ORGANIZATION
A Behavioral Science Approach

ROBERT TANNENBAUM, IRVING R. WESCHLER
AND FRED MASSARTK

Volume 27

Routledge

Taylor & Francis Group

LONDON AND NEW YORK

Contents

Preface vii

PART ONE. LEADERSHIP AND THE INFLUENCE PROCESS

Introduction 1

1. Some Basic Issues in Human Relations 5

2. Leadership: A Frame of Reference 22

3. Cultural Perspectives on Understanding People 43

4. The Process of Understanding People 52

5. How to Choose a Leadership Pattern 67

6. The Introduction of Change in Organizations 80

7. Participation by Subordinates 88

8. The Management of Differences 101

PART TWO. SENSITIVITY TRAINING: A PERSONAL APPROACH TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF LEADERS

* Introduction 119

9. Looking at Ourselves: A New Focus in Management Training 123

10. A Sensitivity Training Group in Action 141

11. Sensitivity Training for the Management Team 167

12. Observations on the Trainer Role: A Case Study 188

13. Phases of Group Development 206

14. Assessing the Training Impact 222

PART THREE. STUDIES IN ORGANIZATION

Introduction 239

15. A Look at Formal Organization: The Manager Concept 243

16. A Look at Formal Organization: Managerial Decision Making 265

17. Organization in Action: Bureaucracy in a Government Laboratory 287

18. Developing Objectives and Evaluation Procedures in Research Organizations 304

19. The Impact of Altered Objectives: Factionalism and Organizational Change in a Research Laboratory 313

20. Problems of Evaluation: The Impact of Interpersonal Relations on Ratings of Performance 324

21. Assessing Organizational Effectiveness: Job Satisfaction, Productivity, and Morale*	333
22. Assessing Organizational Effectiveness: The Multi-relational Sociometric Survey.	346
23. Relations with the Host: Social Research Faces Industry.	371-
24. Relations with the Subject: Problems in the Use of Indirect Methods of Attitude Measurement	383

PART FOUR. COMMENTARIES

Scientific Concern for the Human Factor in Industry, by George R. Bach.	393
Psyche, Sensitivity, and Social Structure, by Robert Dubin	401
Management and Human Relations, by Lyndall F. Urwick	416

BIBLIOGRAPHIES

Publication of the Human Relations Research Group, 1950-1960	431
Selected and Annotated Bibliography of Works by Other Authors.	436
Name Index	447
Subject Index	453