

Atlas of the European novel

1800-1900

Franco Moretti

V

VERSO

London* New York

Contents

List of figures	vii
Acknowledgements	xiii

Introduction

Towards a geography of literature	i
1. 'General, you make use of maps	3
2. 'But we have no artistic atlases'	6

Chapter 1

The novel, the nation-state	11
1. Home-land	13
2. England and its double	18
3. 'The recent losses in the West India estate'	24
4. Geography of ideas	29
5. Far from the center	33
6. Theoretical interlude I. Of space and style	40
7. Taking the high road	47
8. 'A mighty big river, resembling an immense snake uncoiled'	58
9. Village, provinces, metropolis	64
10. Theoretical interlude II. Geography of plot	70

Chapter 2

A tale of two cities	75
1. The problem	77
2. 'We live in so different a part of town	79
3. 'A mosaic of little worlds'	87
4. Fear in Paris	101
5. Theoretical interlude III. Stories of the Third	105

6. Fields of power	115
7. The third London	124
8. Very Curiously Brought Together	134
9. City of clues	134

Chapter 3

Narrative markets, ca. 18 jo	141
1. 'Experiments upon diagrams'	144
2. Theoretical interlude IV. Normal literature	148
3. England becomes an island	151
4. A united and uneven market	158
5. Theoretical interlude V. Center and periphery	164
6. The three Europes	171
7. A bibliographical investigation	174
8. 'A universal inter-dependence of nations'	185
9. Theoretical interlude VI. Market and forms	191
10. 'Sustained by its historical backwardness'	195

Index of names and works	199
---------------------------------	------------